The best thing about VU is at has nice big open spaces on the grounds.

I love it here, it's quiet, it's not as busy as the other campuses.

St Albans has really, really good parking. It's just a 5-minute walk into the classes or less.

It's wicked, yeah, it's a great place, most people you look around to are really friendly. You actually get some really good friends just being here.

I actually kind of get that good vibes from the other students. As an international student you need that kind of community feeling, within the uni, so it's helped a lot.

The library is awesome. Lots of quiet space and collaborative space.

The 3 or 4 cafes we've got is really good for socialising, you get to chill out there as well.

Also we've got computer labs - there's mac labs and PC.

There's heaps of noticeboards as well so you always know where everyone's going on the weekends.

We have a lot of theory and prac together. We come into the clinic and we treat people from the real world, so it's good, it helps me learn. So you're responding to a 70-year-old patient who we believe is not breathing.

The course is recommended by paramedics out on the road already. They have state-of-the-art equipment here.

We've got teachers that have worked in web development themselves so we can base what we're doing around what we'll be doing in the real world.

The teachers are very friendly. They're always available for consultation and any questions you might have after class or anything. They've all been really good, really easy to approach.

It's where my kids graduated.

The youngest students coming out of high school are able to help the oldies.

It's a small community and everyone gets to know each other by the end of the course.

It's real easy to study at VU, it's really comfortable.
