Lawry Mahon- Lecturer- School of Education

When was the last time you learnt something really meaningful from someone who you didn’t like. Getting to know our student body is crucial in order to know where they’ve come from to help work out where they need to get to.

Debora Lipson, Lecturer, Science Education, School of Education

Victoria University cares about every individual student that walks through its doors. We bend over backwards to make sure that they’re course map works, that they succeed in the units that they are undertaking. We give them opportunities to grow and to develop and to learn.

James Broatch Doctor of Philosophy (PhD) Sport and Exercise Science

Victoria University’ been a great support network for me. Not just with my principal supervisor but also co supervisors, everybody is willing to help.

Julie Arnold Lecturer (Early Years and Primary Literacy Education), School of Education

I’m passionate about teaching because I have an interest in people. And doing things in a collaborative way.

James Broatch Doctor of Philosophy (PhD) Sport and Exercise Science

All the lecturers having industry experience makes me feel very secure.

Dr Charles Mphande Senior Lecturer- School of Social Sciences and Psychology.

And I’ve seen organisations like them so much and invite them to stay on to work.

Dr Mark Vicars Senior Lecturer, School of Education.

What is good about VU and the School of Education is that we take the time to listen to our students, to provide them with the support they require.

Julie Arnold Lecturer (Early Years and Primary Literacy Education), School of Education

I like to get to know the students. I think that a good teacher knows their students very well and therefore can understand how they learn.

Lawry Mahon- Lecturer- School of Education

We don’t work 40 hour weeks at this university. Sometimes at home I do get into trouble for responding to emails at all hours but that’s when the issues arise in people’s lives and that’s when they sometimes actually need a response straight away. So we see a commitment to students as a passion.

Rebecca Deverell Student, Bachelor of Psychological Studies, School of Social Sciences and Psychology
Everything they are teaching us is happening in the real world now. I really like that. Its actually interesting to hear what the job will actually be. What you’re going to be doing.

Sue Dodd, Lecturer, School of Communication and the Arts

They remember that experience and then they can build on that and take that out to the world

Dr Bob Stewart, Associate Professor, School of Sport and Exercise Science

When a student comes in they are immediately embraced and made one of the family if you like and that is an important thing. So I think the beauty of this university, that is Victoria University is that we integrate everyone into the community.

Dr Mark Vicars Senior Lecturer, School of Education.

It’s incredibly important that our graduates go out into the work place having an understanding of the discourse in which they are working.

Maree Keating Lecturer-Organisational Communication, Communication and the Arts

They want to add value to the skills and knowledge they already have

Lawry Mahon- Lecturer- School of Education

We will offer you challenges that no other university will offer you. We will offer you opportunities to actually support those challenges that other universities won’t offer you.

Dr Mark Vicars, Senior Lecturer, School of Education.

What we do changes lives
