WHY SOCIOLOGY?
Sociologists study a wide variety of topics, including:
• education, work and unemployment
• the family
• health, sex, gender and sexuality
• ethnicity and racism
• equality, opportunity, inequity
• crime, law and social justice

Of course sociology is not the only disciplinary framework through which to explore aspects of contemporary social life as far-ranging as gender relations and law-and-order. So, what makes a sociological approach distinct? C. Wright Mills suggested that sociology is distinguished by the application of a particular kind of imagination—‘the sociological imagination’.

The Sociology specialisation begins with an overview of sociology—an introduction to how we might go about applying the sociological imagination to a wide range of aspects of contemporary social arrangements. A specialisation in sociology provides students with the opportunity in later semesters to focus more closely on specific aspects of social life, both local and international.

The Sociology specialisation aims to foster students’ critical analytical skills and to offer opportunities for students to apply sociological tools of analysis to their own inquiries into contemporary social life.

VOCATIONAL OPPORTUNITIES
The Sociology specialisation answers employment demands for graduates with a strong social science background and well developed analytical skills. It assists students to prepare themselves for a wide range of employment opportunities including roles in public administration, education, community services, as well as para-legal, policy and social research positions.

STRUCTURE OF THE SOCIOLOGY SPECIALISATION
This specialisation is taken as part of a three year sequence of study in a Bachelor of Arts degree at either the Footscray Park or St Albans Campus. Units may also be taken as electives within other degree programs. Students are required to complete SIX units including the two first-year units. Students should consult their course structure to determine if specific units from the ‘Other Specialisation’ list should be undertaken to satisfy the requirements of their degree. Only a selection of the second and third-year units are offered each year.
