WHO VISUAL ART STUDIES?
The Visual Art specialisation aims to develop a personal visual vocabulary and support experimentation and innovation. Students will gain experience in creative production methods across media and disciplines such as painting, drawing, sculpture, installation, video and photography. They will conceive, implement and evaluate artworks in the context of the professional gallery exhibition, or an equivalent public outcome, and engage with the wider visual arts community. Practical work will be supported by rigorous critical analysis and interpretation informed by contemporary and historical art production and discourse.

Through choice of units, students can concentrate on Visual Art - and complement their work in other discipline areas offered in the Faculty of Arts, Education and Human Development including Professional Writing, Performance, Literary Studies, Psychology, Sociology (Policy Studies or Asia-Pacific Studies), Gender Studies and Multimedia.

VOCATIONAL OPPORTUNITIES
Graduates may gain employment as professional artists practicing in painting and drawing, photography, media and digital art, sculpture, installation or interdisciplinary art.

They may become an administrator in visual arts, work as a gallery owner, museum or art gallery employee. They may teach visual art at primary or secondary school or at university level. There are also opportunities to move on to postgraduate courses in Visual Art.

HOW CAN I STUDY VISUAL ART?
You do not need prior knowledge to enroll in visual art studies however, artistic ability and creativity are essential and some previous training in visual art is an advantage. The units can be taken as a three-year specialisation or a two-year sub-specialisation in Bachelor of Arts degrees, in combined Arts/Business degrees, or in other degrees in which the study of visual art can be part of the course structure: students studying in the areas of performance, psychology, professional writing, public relations, multimedia and other areas can also undertake visual art studies. Students can also take visual art units as electives, which can be credited towards a degree in any discipline area. You can undertake honours in this field, and postgraduate study.
