WQRA is a not-for-profit company funded by its members, who include around 45 Australian water utilities, engineering companies, consultants, universities and research organisations. WQRA supports the training of young industry professionals to help build long term operational excellence and a strong research capability in the Australian water community.

Applications are invited for the following Honours Scholarships in 2011:

WQRA Honours Scholarships

Sponsorships are valued at $10,000 each

As part of the commitment to building skills and capacity within the Water Industry WQRA offers Honours Scholarships to students with exceptional research potential who are currently undertaking a relevant degree (e.g. science, social science or engineering). WQRA scholarships provide students with the opportunity to focus their research skills and professional development in a wide range of water industry related areas. Students who excel in this program will have greatly enhanced opportunities for employment in the water industry or to progress to a postgraduate degree in a water-related field of research. The Scholarships are open to students with Australian and New Zealand Citizenship and Permanent Residency.

Call for applications opens 7 September 2010

The closing date for applications is Friday 1 October 2010

Information on the available projects and application forms can be found on the WQRA website, Education Page from 7 September 2010
